Social skills and competences

In the course of New Technologies in the University of Aveiro, the majority of the works is done in a group that may or may not be pre-defined. This requires a certain level of social interaction to allow and facilitate the development of a good project.

Organisational skills and competences	For the result of a project come out in a effectively and efficiently way, we should proceed to the division of tasks and their correct attribution to those who are most appropriate to their development. In the course the students were responsible for distributing these tasks, so I'm aware of the organization and the different phases of a project. So in addition to developing the capacity for experience itself, I also got some important concepts in the subjects of "Implementation and Control of Multimedia Projects" in "Management Companies", and also in "Human Resource Management."
